Chef Jennifer Struik, MS, RD

A longtime supporter of American Cancer Society, Chef Jenn draws inspiration from, and has a long history of, intertwining food and medicine. As a registered dietician, she knows that food as medicine continues to become more prevalent and critical for health and well-being. Chef Jenn poured six years of talent into the medical industry before returning to her passion in the kitchen as a Chef and Dietician. She marries her knowledge of nutrition and culinary arts so we can all enjoy healthy eating as a gourmet experience. As a personal chef for her brand, Jenny With The Good Eats LLC, and as a chef instructor for the Secchia Institute for Culinary Education at Grand Rapids Community College, Chef has recently started co-coaching the NASA HUNCH team, allowing high school students to develop nutritious recipes for NASA astronauts traveling to space. Throughout the years, she has been named one of Grand Rapids Business Journals 40 under 40 Business Leaders, one of West Michigan Woman Magazine's Emerging Leaders, and a Food Network's Winner on the show "Supermarket Stakeout."
